

Lincoln Street School
FAMILY SCHOOL COMPACT
2012 / 2013

Parent Involvement in schools is an important component of educational change. The importance of involving parents in their children's education has long been recognized. Research shows that when parents are involved in schools, children achieve more academically, parents and teachers form partnerships, and the school and community environments improve.

The following statements define the partnership between the home and our school.

Please check off all areas that you agree to follow during the school year. Please return a signed copy to school and feel free to meet and discuss this compact with any staff member.
